Decision

This decision will govern the two appeals that arise out of an award made by Shri Shiva Pujan Rai, Chairman of the Industrial Tribunal, Bihar (herein after referred to as the Tribunal) dated the 22nd December, 1950, to whom the dispute between the Rohtas Industries Ltd., and its workmen represented, amongst others, by the Staff Union, was referred for adjudication by the Government of Bihar Notification No. D-10-50-LT-147, dated the 9th June, 1950. By the terms of reference the items of dispute that required adjudication were :—

- (i) Should the compulsory leave scheme prepared by the Management be introduced, if so, on what conditions and for what period?
- (ii) Should the electric duty for consumption of electric current be charged from the employees or should the Management pay it?
- (iii) Whether the deduction of two days' wages for the 1st and 2nd April, 1950 due to stoppage of work on account of Satyagraha by certain members of the staff over the issue of the compulsory leave was justified or not?

- (iv) Whether there is any surplus staff in the offices and in the factories as alleged by the Management? If so, to what extent retrenchment, if any, will be justified on grounds of rationalization and economy.

The decision in respect of Items No. (i) and (iv) is challenged by the Union in Appeal No. Cal-17/51 and that in respect of items No. (ii), (iii) and (iv) by the Company in Appeal No. Cal-39/51.

2. As to Appeal No. Cal-17/51, the two items (i) and (iv), though separately numbered, are connected with the controversy whether there is any surplus staff in the offices and factories which can be retrenched on the grounds of rationalization and economy. Previously various disputes between the Company and its workmen were referred to a Tribunal in August, 1948 and during the pendency of the proceedings, the company proposed to re-organise the departments and prepared a scheme which involved the retrenchment of 94 persons in the non-technical staff of different departments including the Cane Department. The announcement of this scheme caused commotion amongst Labour and at that time the Hon'ble Labour Minister of Bihar happened to be at Dalmianagar when the Management and the Union approached him to adjust the differences between the parties arising on the re-organization scheme. On behalf of the Union the retrenchment was opposed. The Management undertook not to retrench any one of the persons but agreed to give some surplus hands earned leave and others varying jobs with the intention of absorbing the surplus in one or other departments in due course. Therefore, no directions were given by the Minister who made certain suggestions in writing which has been called by the Tribunal "an award on a non-official reference to arbitration". That is a misnomer, for the Hon'ble Labour Minister concluded thus :—

"these are my tentative suggestions and if the parties agree these may be given effect to; but if there is any serious difference between the different interests concerned, this matter will be referred to adjudication for final decision."

3. In considering one of the terms of reference No. 41 in the previous dispute, namely, "any other matter that the Tribunal may consider necessary after hearing both parties" the Tribunal in its award dated the 3rd January, 1949 interpreted the so called award of the Hon'ble Labour Minister and stated "that in view of the undertaking given by the Management the Hon'ble Labour Minister has not given any direction about the employees included in the list. The undertaking given to Hon'ble Minister must be fulfilled." Presumably the Management did not carry into effect the undertaking given and differences arose between the parties and a reference was made resulting in the award under appeal.

In this reference the Management contended that the scheme of compulsory leave would not meet the requirements of the situation and therefore, demanded retrenchment of 186 persons of non-technical staff besides the staff of the Cane Department. The Tribunal by its award permitted retrenchment of 84 persons of the non-technical staff of whom 33 belonged to the Cane Development Department and 12, out of 24, belonged to the Cane Accounts Department who were made seasonal, 7 belonged to the Share Department and 2 to the Mechanical Department, the total numbering 54. On the footing, there were 423 persons employed in the various Departments, other than those mentioned above, he allowed in addition an overall retrenchment at 7 per cent. which roughly comes to 30 persons. This, with 54 persons ordered to be retrenched comes up to 84. The Union appeal is directed against this Order.

4. The Union's contention is that the order of retrenchment is bad, because :—

- (a) The Tribunal had no jurisdiction to order retrenchment of 33 persons of the Cane Development Department and 12 of the Cane Accounts Department as the reference was limited to an enquiry about the surplus and its retrenchment "in the offices and in the factories."
- (b) The Tribunal, in order to find out the surplus should have first ascertained the exact number of persons in employment in the offices and in the factories and the number required for carrying out the undertakings of the Industry then should have arrived at the surplus, has not been done;
- (c) The Tribunal's order directing retrenchment of 7 per cent. of the total number of 423 wrong, inasmuch as the figure 423 is an over-estimate and the percentage has been arbitrarily fixed.

Regarding the retrenchment of the employees of the Cane Development Department, the Cane Accounts Department, the Share Department and Medical Department, we must mention at the outset that the Union did not offer any criticism on the reasons given by the Tribunal justifying its conclusion for retrenchment. It is quite probable that the Union felt that the reasons given were convincing as in fact, in our opinion, they are, and the Union therefore limited its argument as indicated in contention (a). The Union urged that the scope of enquiry in Item No. 4 of the reference was intended to be confined to the surplus in the non-technical staff working inside the premises either in offices or factories and not to the outside workers. The persons attached to the Cane Department according to the Union, are field workers, whose business is to contact the cane growers, to instruct and assist them in securing better production and eventually to procure cane grown by them for the factory. As such, they do not come within the purview of Item (iv). We are unable to give Item (iv) the restricted interpretation as asked for. The reference was in connection with the dispute for retrenchment of the non-technical staff on the ground of rationalisation and economy. During the previous reference also the question of retrenchment of the people employed in the Cane Department was raised. There is nothing in the reference to indicate that these persons were specifically excluded. The workmen of the Cane Department obviously are the staff attached either to the office or the factory. The argument cannot but be rejected. The Tribunal, in our opinion, rightly held on the facts of this case that the retrenchment of these people for the reasons given to the Tribunal by the Management during the course of the enquiry in asking for the total abolition of the Cane Development Department, is justifiable. Equally sound are the reasons given by the Tribunal for making 12 employees of the Cane Accounts Department seasonal. We are not inclined also to interfere with the order of retrenchment of the remaining nine employees whose cases have been specifically dealt with by the Tribunal and have not been questioned by the Union in its argument before us.

5. We shall now take up the contentions (b) and (c) together. It is admitted that from time to time, the Tribunal asked the Management to supply lists of employees and that the Management from time to time did it. Our attention has been drawn by the Union to three such lists, one showing, exclusive of the staff of the Cane Development Department and of the staff of the Cane Accounts Department, the number of non-technical employees in the various departments to be 456. In another list submitted by the Management, the number of persons employed is shown to be 292 and the third list submitted by the Management shows the number to be 574. The Union contended that the Management did not furnish correct lists of the employees and the total number has been increased from time to time and an examination of the lists would show that there has been duplication. It is true that there are three lists. The list showing the number to be 574 was sent by the Management to the Tribunal after the hearing had been concluded and which the Tribunal refused to take notice of it. Evidence is lacking to show the circumstances under which the list showing the number of employees to be 292 was called for and submitted by the Management. Mr. G. P. Kar, appearing on behalf of the Management, states that so far as the Management remembers that this list was submitted in answer to the requisition of the Tribunal requiring the number and details of the superior staff of the employees. There is no mention of this list in the award, obviously because the list submitted was not considered by the Tribunal to be relevant for the purpose of the enquiry. The other list which shows the number of employees to be 456 and which has been accepted by the Tribunal was given by the Management in its rejoinder where the Management dealt with the different departments giving the specific number of employees with their designations and furnished the number which according to it required retrenchment for the reasons stated therein. This is the list which has been mentioned by the Tribunal in its award and on which it relied. The Union has criticised the different items in this list with a view to show that it is an inflated list and there has been duplication. We have not appreciated the arguments of the Union on this point. In the rejoinder, the identical list is mentioned. The Union was given an opportunity to examine the rejoinder and make its statement regarding it. It took time to consider the statement made in the rejoinder, but did not offer any objection. If the list was an incorrect one as is now argued by the Union, it was not impossible for the Union to have challenged it and prove its incorrectness before the Tribunal by giving the correct figure but the Union kept silent. No explanation has been offered by the Union about its silence on the question. We are, therefore, not inclined to give effect to its contention unsupported by any evidence that there is duplication in the list or that the total number of the non-technical staff excluding the Cane Department and Cane Accounts Department is inflated or is less than 456 in number.

6. We are, however, of opinion that the percentage for retrenchment from the total number has been fixed arbitrarily. It is true that Shri Shiva Pujan Rai had visited the different departments and noticed some surplus staff but he remarked in the award that it was not possible for him to fix the exact strength of such staff in the different departments. Moreover the finding is that though some small units of the Industry had been closed, the larger units have been expanded considerably and some units which had been closed at the date of the reference which the Company at that time apprehended could never be reopened, have not only started work but have been expanded. These findings have not been contravened before us. The increase of work by reason of those expansions would require the employment of more clerical staff than what the Company estimated when the reference was made. In these circumstances the direction for an overall retrenchment of 7 per cent. of the total number of employees in the other departments does not seem to us to be justifiable. The learned counsel for the Management also urged that the percentage determined by the Tribunal is arbitrary. It should have been higher than 7 per cent. So both parties are agreed on the point that the percentage was arbitrarily fixed. We are of the view that as to the question of retrenchment of the employees, further materials should have been collected by the Tribunal and the number of persons to be retrenched should have been ascertained on more definite materials. Therefore, an overall retrenchment of this description cannot be allowed to prevail. We, therefore, set aside the order of the Tribunal regarding the additional retrenchment of the 7 per cent. of the total of 423 persons. In this view of the matter, whether the total number of the non-technical staff, excluding the staff of the Cane Development and Cane Accounts Department was 456 or less loses importance. The directions given in the award under appeal relating to the manner in which retrenchment is to be effected and the rules in respect thereto to be observed are upheld. The modification of the award is only in respect of the number to be retrenched which is confirmed to 54 employees of the non-technical staff. This disposes of the Union's appeal and the corresponding part, namely, the question of retrenchment, raised in the Company's appeal. The remaining two points in the Company's appeal will now have to be considered.

7. The facts bearing upon the 3rd point of the reference are as follows :—

The Company proposed to put seventeen non-technical employees on compulsory leave. It issued notices on them on the 29th March, 1950, requiring them to go on compulsory leave as from the 1st April next. These notices were in violation of Standing Order No. 10 which required notice for 15 days. The matter of shortness of notice was taken up by the Union to the Government Labour Officer who held on the 31st March that the notices were irregular. The Company not having taken any steps to withdraw or modify the said notices in time, the employees stopped work on the 1st April. The Company, however, withdrew the notices and issued fresh ones requiring those employees to go on compulsory leave from the 15th April. This was done at about 1 P.M. The day being a Saturday, the offices closed at 2 P.M. Many employees who had not joined at the time when office hours began had gone away and so had no timely knowledge of the withdrawal of the illegal notices. They could not join for the remaining part of the day. They would have joined if they were present in the precincts of the office or had known before 2 P.M. of the withdrawal of the illegal notices, for the cause of friction which led to the stoppage of work, had them been removed. The next day was a Sunday. They all joined on Monday. The Company insists on a Standing Order which provides that if an employee is absent on a Saturday or on a day immediately preceding a holiday he would lose his wages not only for the day on which he was absent, but also for the following Sunday or the period of the holiday, as the case may be. As the illegal notices referred to above were the cause of the friction which led to the stoppage of work for which the Company was solely responsible, we do not think that the employees concerned should be made to lose their wages for Sunday, the 2nd April and for more than half a day of Saturday. The award made in this respect by the Tribunal is fair and equitable.

8. The last question is, whether the employees are bound to pay to the Company the electricity duty imposed by the Behar Electricity Duty Act, XXXVI of 1948.

9. The Company generates electric energy in its power house and supplies a part thereof to the Behar Government under an agreement. The rest it consumes in its factory and in supplying light in the yards, streets and quarters of its employees. The supply to the Behar Government is metered but the rest is not. The employees of the Company who live in its quarters are being supplied electric energy generated by the Company free of costs all along and from a time before the Behar Electricity Duty Act (hereinafter referred to as the Behar Act) was passed, and it is the common case of the parties that free supply of electricity is a condition of service of the employees who occupy the Company's quarters. On these admitted facts the question which is a question of law, has to be decided. As in our opinion the question is a substantial one, the case comes within section 7(1) clause (a) of the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act and so the preliminary objection as to the competency of the appeal in this respect raised by the respondents is over-ruled.

10. The Company is a corporate body not holding a licence under Part II of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910. It is, therefore, not a "licensee" as defined in the Behar Act. It is a person other than a "licensee" which generates electric energy. Section 4 of the Behar Act deals with both these classes and the scheme is that the "licensee" as also such a person is to pay to the Government the whole of the duty payable under the Act. Sub-section (2) of that section gives the "licensee" in express terms the right to recover the amount of duty payable by the consumer on the units sold to him. This indicates that the legislature intended to impose a direct obligation on this class of consumers to pay duty, the licensee acting in their cases made merely a collector. But there is no corresponding provision entitling a person other than a "licensee", who generates electric energy, to recover duty on the units supplied to, and consumed by, its employees. This furnishes some indication that the legislature did not intend recovery of any duty from an employee by the employer who generates electricity and supplies electric energy but who is not a "licensee". It also indicates that the Behar Act did not intend to impose in terms an obligation on such an employee to pay duty on the electric energy consumed by him. A taxing statute requires clear words for imposing liability. Such an employer can, therefore, only recover the duty from the employee either on the basis of contract, express or implied or on general principles of law. In the case before us, there is no express contract, and no contract can be implied from facts and circumstances, because at the time when free supply of electricity to the employees commenced neither party had in contemplation the event that duty on electricity would be imposed by Government in future. The enquiry, therefore, must be limited to a search of general principles of law—principles which go under the denomination of quasi contracts.

11. Section 3 of the Behar Act imposes the liability to pay duty on every unit of electric energy consumed subject to certain exceptions which are not material to the case before us. The liability to pay the total amount of duty payable is imposed on the "licensee" or any other person generating electric energy but who is not a "licensee". Thus the company has been placed under an obligation to pay the whole of the duty payable, and if it failed to do so the amount could be recovered from it as arrears of land revenue. If the employees had been placed by the Act under an obligation to pay duty on the units consumed by them the Company could have recovered the amount which was payable by them but which had been in fact paid by it, for then the Company would have been interested in the payment within the meaning of Section 69 of the Indian Contract Act, or would have had an interest in making the payment and could have been said to have acted "lawfully" within the meaning of Section 70 of that Act. If, however, no such obligation had been imposed on the employees by the Behar Act, section 69 would not apply on the ground that they were not bound "by law to pay" and section 70 would not apply because they could not be taken to have been "benefited" by the payment. The case would be one of discharge, by payment of a legal liability by the very person on whom alone the liability had been placed. For the same reason there would be no scope for the application of the general rule of precise and equitable even if the view expressed in some decisions that sections 69 and 70 of the Contract Act do not exhaust the law on the subject be held to be correct. We have already expressed the view that the legislature did not intend to impose any liability to pay duty on employees to whom electric energy was being supplied by his employer who produces that energy but who is not a "licensee" as defined in the Behar Act, as in the case of a consumer to whom electric energy is supplied by sale or otherwise by a "licensee". We accordingly over-rule the claim of the Company. The result is that appeal No. 17 of 1951 is decreed in part and No. 39 of 1951 is dismissed. The award of the Tribunal stands subject to the modifications indicated in our decision, relating to the number of the non-technical staff which the Company can retrench.

Parties to bear their respective costs in both the appeals.
